

WOLF ROAD TARGET AGAIN

Despite the fact that work on Wolf road in Frankfort township is progressing to the satisfaction of all concerned, there are those who are still optimistic enough to hope that a highway from the south, connecting Wheeling and Kankakee, will not run through town and intersect Front street.

The Mokena Good Road Committee has gone on record favoring the straight north and south route as approved by the state highway department. The village political ring headed by Ona McGovney, precinct committeeman, and aspirant to the place of honor on the board of supervisors held at present by William Kampe, have always favored the improvement of the road that intersects the Lincoln highway just west of Wolf road. That route, which was at one time approved by the state, would provide for the paving of Front st., at the expense of the state. The business establishments of the village politicians who are affiliated with Mr. McGovney are located on Front street.

Wants Support

Mr. McGovney no doubt feeling some time when he announces his candidacy for supervisor, has been hard pressed at the task of doing what he can for the "gasoline alley" group, as the Front street politicians are referred to locally, and at the same time appearing to be in accord with the views of the good roads committee that represents the sentiment of the majority of the property owners of the community.

He advocated the western road, and severed diplomatic relations with the committee when they won the fight to have Wolf road improved. Those in sympathy with the views of the committee are at the present time accusing those on "gasoline alley" of conspiring to defeat the Wolf road project, that when completed will not enhance the value of their respective properties. It is pointed out that Mr. McGovney, being an influential citizen, having entree to the offices of the chairman of the bond issue and good roads committees, is bringing all the pressure at his command to bear upon the situation. It is said that his faction is making capital of the fact that the right-of-way through the Clarence Cleveland farm has not yet been acquired by the county. Mr. Cleveland's reluctance to allow five acres of beautiful forest to be destroyed for the sake of a highway, is said to be Mr. McGovney's trump card. He is represented as hoping that the Cleveland matter will drag along, until in despair, the state will in some mysterious manner abandon present plans and improve the westward route that will cause Front street to be paved.

North Explains

However, W. W. North, chairman of the right-of-way committee, is certain that the road will eventually be built through the Cleveland farm as approved by the state highway department. He said that Mr. Cleveland has refused to discuss the matter with his committee and that it no doubt would be necessary to have the case placed in the hands of the state's attorney for condemnation proceedings.

The good roads committee in Mokena is anxious that the right-of-way committee place the matter in the hands of the state's attorney at the earliest possible moment, in order that the legal action in connection with the Cleveland case be disposed of as soon possible. The committee is not in accord with Mr. Cleveland's views and are outspoken in expressing themselves as certain that the road will be built as per the state's specifications. However, Mr. Cleveland is determined to save the beautiful forest tract, and has expressed himself as willing to go into court and argue his case with the county. Mr. Cleveland's attitude is prompted by a desire to preserve for posterity a rare wooded tract that is famous for its natural beauty. The good roads committee is prompted by the two given points on as straight a line as possible. It seems inevitable that the case will delay the construction of an important highway and that it will be at least two years before the Wolf road is paved to the Lincoln highway.

MOKENA P. T. A. NOTES

We told you last week there would be a big meeting in Mokena October 28th. It is to be the 2nd meeting of our P. T. A. We urge all parents to attend and everyone that is interested in our school, school work or any school child. If you are not interested, come anyway, just for curiosity and we feel sure you will go away filled with enthusiasm and a desire to attend all meetings. It is a very worthy cause, one in which all should take a keen interest. It affords you the chance to keep in touch with the work of your child and the school. It gives you the opportunity to talk with the teachers, where they are not busy with their classes. They are always glad to co-operate with the parents in any detail and perchance may be glad to take some little matter up with the parents personally for the welfare of the child. It enables you to become a part of a great body, striving to do their best for the school children.

Committeeman of Mokena Explains Wolf Road Stand

The article appearing in the Farmers Weekly Review of Joliet as reprinted in this issue regarding the Wolf road, has called forth the following statement from Ona E. McGovney, precinct committeeman of Mokena, who was quite prominently mentioned in the article:

"I feel that in order to give the public the right impression on several matters pertaining to the Wolf road program as written up in an article in the Farmers Weekly Review last week, I wish to point out a few discrepancies:

"I cannot find anyone in Mokena who is opposed to the completion of Wolf road to the Lincoln highway as outlined in the Will County bond issue, and I am certainly in full accord with this program. There is no conspiracy afoot to swing any part of the Wolf road over in favor of a road on Front street. Even if such a move existed it could not be done under the present bond issue and only a new bond issue could be used for such a purpose.

"I do not find anyone in Mokena who is against having Front street paved by the state, thus taking the burden off the village of maintaining this street.

"I further wish to put the thought across that the old Mokena Hard Road Improvement Association indirectly referred to in the Farmers Review article, is a thing of the past. The committee that is now active and has been instrumental in securing the paving of Wolf road was organized a year ago and consists of the following: J. V. Hall, Chas. Hirsch, Wm. Semmler, Emil D. Cappel and Ona E. McGovney.

"As far as Mr. Cleveland's reluctance to allow five acres of forest to be destroyed on his farm for the sake of a highway being my trump card as outlined in last week's Review article is concerned, I fail to see the connection. My activities on Wolf road the past year have been in full co-operation with the other members of the Mokena road committee.

"It is true that a movement was on foot to get four miles of highway from the Lincoln highway on thru Front street to route 51 the past summer, but this was not at the expense of Wolf road, but was on the proposed gas tax road program of Will County which, however, was killed by the county board at their last session.

"Our road committee did go on record in favor of this highway this summer, realizing that it would be of vital importance to our community if built, and still at the same time not interfere with the paving of Wolf road."

MAUE BRIDGE IS FINISHED

Albert Pfaff, New Lenox contractor has completed the Maue bridge northeast of Mokena and the road is open for traffic again. It has been closed for some time. The bridge was built by the county and township at a total cost of $1821.85. All of the work was supervised by highway commissioner Emil D. Cappel of Frankfort township.

Mokena Alderman Angry When Raid News Is Published

Alderman Edward Marti of Mokena was highly incensed last week over the publication of the story of the recent raid made on the Martie ice cream parlor in Mokena by Will County officials in which booze was found and a fine was assessed. Efforts were made to have this paper suppress the news of the raid and when these efforts proved in vain, alderman Martie grew violently angry and threatened dire vengeance to the editor.

News of every raid made in the territory of this paper has always been published and we will continue to publish such news regardless of who it hits. Those who engage in illegal business must expect to stand the consequences.

Does the alderman, as a public official, favor the suppression of all news bearing on liquor raids, or does this suppression only apply to certain favored individuals?

Does the alderman regard his oath of office to uphold the laws, to mean anything?

Mokena Man Exhibits Prize Onion Crop

Another very interesting garden exhibit has been added to the agricultural display at the Mokena State Bank by way of an onion display from the garden of Erhardt Oswald of Mokena. A basket containing 50 genuine Spanish onions comprises the exhibit. The basket holds a bushel. One onion measures 14 1-2 inches around. Ten onions weigh 12 pounds.

This bushel of 50 onions weighs 47 pounds without the basket.

These onions were raised and grown in the garden of Mr. Oswald on a patch of ground 15 by 26 feet. Five bushels of these onions were raised on this patch.

Mokena Family In Need of Help

Talk about suffering due to the cold weather, brings a case up right here in Mokena in need of aid. The case in question is that of Mrs. Herbert Grater and her mother, Mrs. Mary Mau. They have no coal to burn and no money coming in. Mr. Grater has only six days work a month in Chicago and the income from this source is mighty slim.

Mrs. Grater has been bedridden for years and often times is in need of medical attention. The only fuel that has been available has been the small amount gathered along the railroad tracks by Mrs. Mau.

This family is in need and should be given aid of some kind. The News-Bulletin suggests that a committee of public spirited citizens investigate this case further and do something right away to prevent further distress when colder weather sets in.

Tinley Stores Extend Closing Date After November First

In order to convenience the farmers of their territory who are busy now husking corn and find it more convenient to do their buying two times a week until their field work is over, the Tinley Park business men have decided to keep their places of business open next week Wednesday night but will close on Wednesday nights after November first until further notice.

Plan to Change Train Time For Students

In an attempt to make a satisfactory adjustment of the Rock Island train schedule, which would permit Mokena high school students to reach Joliet in time for their classes a joint meeting with the Rock Island officials was held at the headquarters of the Interstate Commerce Commission on Thursday of last week.

Mokena was represented by L. G. Bruder, P. J. Roessner and Ralph E. Coler. The Rock Island railroad was represented by W. J. Leahy, assistant passenger traffic manager, with several of his assistants.

The train schedules were thoroughly gone into and assurance was given by Mr. Zorn of the Commerce Commission that the matter could be worked out so that train No. 271, which now arrives at Joliet at 8:30 a. m., would be adjusted so that the students could take this train and reach their classes on time.

If this concession is granted by the Commerce Commission and the officials of the Rock Island railroad company we sincerely hope that the parents of the students will co-operate by seeing to it that the students take advantage of this concession and use the trains for transportation instead of going by motor.

If we ever hope to maintain satisfactory and pleasant relations with the Rock Island railroad in regard to rates and schedules it is vitally necessary that we have the combined support of the residents of Mokena.

The Tinley Park Legion Post held its social meeting Monday night and the meeting as well as the refreshments were enjoyed. The Lions club has extended an invitation to the Legion Post to attend their Halloween Party next Monday night October 27th and a good time is promised. The Legion Post has offered the use of their hall for the occasion and it is hoped the Lions will accept the offer.

W. R. Schussler of Orland Park, was a visitor at the meeting. Orland Park is starting a Legion Post and as comrade Schussler is the Commander we hope our meeting was a good example for a new Post. We also hope they will feel free to call on us for any help we can give them and to make a good start the resignation of Rev. Paul Sanders as chaplain was accepted so that he could go with the new Post in his own town. It was a big sacrifice and we know they will appreciate it.

The 1931 quota for Tinley Park Post is 45 members and at the rate the membership committee is going it won't be long now. Two new members were accepted at the last meeting and we are now 100 per cent of last year's membership.

LACK OF WATER DELAYS WOLF ROAD PAVING

Powers & Thompson have been buying water from the village of Mokena for their concrete mixing machine on Wolf road. Tuesday evening someone got into the pumping station and snout the motor out. Wednesday morning the water tower was empty. Not having a water supply, no paving could be done so all the men were off the job for the day. Powers & Thompson got busy and had loads of pipe brought in and put on a full force of men who worked all Wednesday night laying and connecting a water line to Hickory Creek. Water is now being pumped from the creek to the mixer. Work was resumed Thursday. Rain and cold weather of last week greatly hampered the paving work. About 1500 feet of paving has been laid on Wolf road south from the Cook and Will county line.

Orland P. T. A. Start on Minstrel

Rehearsals have started in earnest for the forthcoming Orland Park P. T. A. Minstrel show. Eighteen men and fourteen ladies were assembled at the school Auditorium Monday evening when program chairman Mrs. Wade Thomas introduced George Kohl as the director in charge of the production. Mr. Kohl who is connected with Dennisons of Chicago makes a specialty of directing amateur shows and minstrels and thru the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, is donating his time and services to make the Orland Park show a success.

Immediately following his introduction, director Kohl demonstrated that he "knew his stuff" and how to go about it by snapping the assembled group right into attention and starting them into work. The opening and closing ensemble was gone over several times and director Kohl seemed quite pleased with the material at hand and at the enthusiasm displayed. Next rehearsal is set for Monday Oct. 27 at 8 p. m. sharp. All members of the P. T. A. who would like to take part are urged to be present.

Search for "Cradle of Man" in Wild Regions

An expedition is in preparation which will go far into the jungles of Honduras to look for "the cradle of man." That, at least, is among the announced intentions of the explorer, F. A. Mitchell-Hedges, though he has also more definite prospects of discoveries in the remnants of a civilization some thousands of years old located in the province of Mosquitia by a previous search.

But the more romantic quest is that for man's first home on the earth. A great number of scientists have looked for it in all sorts of likely and unlikely places. Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews chose the Gobi desert; others have dug into Mesopotamia and central Africa. Nobody has so far found it.

It appears from the behavior of explorers and anthropologists that primeval man must have insisted on the least accessible part of the world for his first appearance. Expeditions in search of his traces seem always to go off to the other end of nowhere, far from gasoline stations and miniature golf courses. Probably there is no reason for this procedure except that anything is possible in unknown territory. While looking there for what may be found, the explorer may as well look for the cradle of man and thereby give an indisputable dignity and importance to his expedition.—New York Evening Post.

Purchasing Power

The phrases the "purchasing power of money" and the "general level of prices" are reciprocal. To say that the purchasing power of money is high or low is the same thing as to say that the general level of prices is low or high. If the price level is doubled, the purchasing power of money will be halved, and vice versa.

Safety First

"How does it happen you had to make so many detours on your trip?" we asked.

"I found there were too many fools using the main highways," replied the timid driver.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Plans for inspection on October 23 and 24 by 115 delegates coming to Illinois from the convention of highway officials and engineers, assembled at Washington from all parts of the world, include three distinct sections of Illinois. Officials of the department of public works and buildings will meet the delegation at St. Louis and conduct them into Illinois, by way of Alton, traveling by motor busses. They will follow route 3 to Jacksonville, thence, over route 10 to Springfield. En route, the party will stop for a detailed inspection of the famous Bates test road, from which so much scientific information was obtained when Illinois was pioneering in road building, which has been of value in road work the world over. At Springfield, the assembly, as guests at a noon luncheon given by the Springfield Chamber of Commerce, will be officially welcomed to Illinois by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, and to the capital city by Mayor Hal M. Smith. Early in the afternoon, the guests will visit Lincoln's home and tomb, before departing for LaSalle, by way of Bloomington. At LaSalle, the chamber of commerce and the Manufacturers' club will entertain the visitors, and conduct them on a tour of the important industrial plants in that vicinity. On October 24, the forenoon will be devoted to a tour over the following routes: State highways No. 2 and 70 to an intersection with the Lincoln highway, along that route to DeKalb, thence northerly to Sycamore and thence, over route 64 to St. Charles. Executive officers, bureau chiefs and district engineers of the state division of highways will entertain the delegation at a noon luncheon at St. Charles, and then convey them to the Chicago metropolitan area. There, the visitors will view the highway widening and grade separation projects under way and recently completed in the vicinity of the metropolis, completing a comprehensive survey of the highway system of the state, including its arterial routes, its bridges, and its avenues for the dense traffic of the Chicago environs.

November 1 application forms for 1931 auto licenses will be available, according to announcement made by Secretary of State William J. Stratton. Every year thousands of applications have to be returned to applicants because of improperly executed applications or failures to enclose the proper fee, so the secretary is urging careful reading of the blanks. Fees are printed on the reverse side of the applications and are based on horse power in passenger cars and on combined weight of the truck and load in trucks. More care in the writing of names and addresses would also eliminate the return of many license plates which are undeliverable because of wrong addresses. Notaries public, garage owners and automobile clubs, because of the help they extend in making out applications, are being requested particularly to carefully check every item involved before forwarding the application.

Shortage of vitamins A and D in the diet and too little rest are important predisposing factors in bronchopneumonia, the most prevalent of the fatal diseases among children, according to Dr. Andy Hall, state health director. Last year this disease caused 1,459 deaths among children of Illinois, over 1,100 of whom were less than two years old. Developing enough strength and vigor to withstand the work of germs in the system will bring victory in greater measure than trying to escape contact with the germs altogether. He also adds: "Perfect resistance against diphtheria and small pox can be had through immunization with toxin-antitoxin and vaccination," which do not keep the germs out but simply make the body immune to harm. He has issued these statements because the coming of lower temperatures always brings reports of an increase in germ diseases.

The state penal farm near Vandalia is now turning out about 200 gallons of sorghum daily from cane raised during the past summer, expecting to produce a total of about 4,000 gallons this year. In spite of the dry weather, it is estimated that nearly 100 gallons will be about the average amount produced from an acre's crop.

At a meeting of the student council of the University of Illinois, V. L. Kretschmer of Elgin was named president, and Miss Emily Johnson, Paxton, was elected vice president.

The three branches of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Grand Encampment, Grand Lodge and Rebekah assembly, met in Springfield October 20 and 21. Among the features on the program were exemplifying the second degree by the staff of Bushnell Lodge No. 322, exhibition drill by Mokena team of Peru, a program by one hundred children from the Orphans' home at Lincoln, a banquet in honor of Charles Vandettum of Onarga, grand master of the Grand Lodge, and Olive M. Williams, of Salem, president of the Rebekahs, at which Gov. Louis L. Emmerson gave the address of welcome. Those chosen to the highest positions include the following: In the Grand Lodge, Charles Vandettum, present grand master, became grand representative, E. M. Cobb, of Centralia, deputy grand master, advanced to grand master. Thomas P. Fields, of Monmouth, grand warden, was elected deputy grand master. Bairdow, of Waukegan, was chosen president. Bertha Smith, of Herrin, was elected vice president.

Stationing men at each end of a bridge at Henry to warn travelers that the bridge is unsafe and that warning notices have been posted is not sufficient, according to Attorney General Oscar E. J. Paul Clayton, vice president of the Central Illinois Public Service company, Springfield, was elected president of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce at its twelfth annual meeting in Chicago, succeeding Wayne Hummer of LaSalle. In preparation for the Illinois conference on public welfare to be held in Springfield November 10 to 13, public welfare conferences will be held in 28 cities of the state. The preliminary regional conferences are for the purpose of acquainting residents of the larger counties of the state with their local responsibilities and obligations. Three teams of social workers will conduct the conferences throughout the state. Each team will hold approximately two regional meetings each day, one at noon and the other at night.

Persons who have been asked to participate in the regional conferences include: county judges, probation officers, overseers of the poor, chairmen of county boards, directors of county farms, school and county nurses, farm advisers, home advisers, county superintendents of schools, superintendents and principals of city schools, and representatives of the press and social and civic organizations.

The first cottage of the new million-dollar reformatory for women has been completed at Dwight. The minimum age for the reformatory is sixteen years, overlapping by two years the maximum age for the state training school for girls at Geneva. For these age judges will be asked to use their discretion in making commitments. When all the buildings are completed the institution will accommodate about a hundred women who commit lesser crimes and are sentenced for six months or more. The institution is sponsored by the clubs of women of Illinois and will have opportunities for classification, medical care, and training for self-support, now lacking in county and city jails.

Applicants for admission to the bar presented by the Illinois Supreme court by Charles W. Vail, clerk of the court, the second week of the October term numbered 321. Judge Dennis E. Sullivan, of the Superior court of Cook county, and Sidney S. Gorham, member of the Chicago bar, both of whom had sons in the class, made addresses to the new attorneys-at-law during the ceremonies, which took place in the courtroom.

Coal rights under Camp Lincoln have been purchased from the state of Illinois by the Panther Creek Mines, Inc., which submitted the highest bid of $16,080. There are 160 acres of ground to the camp and it is estimated there are 720,000 tons of coal under it.

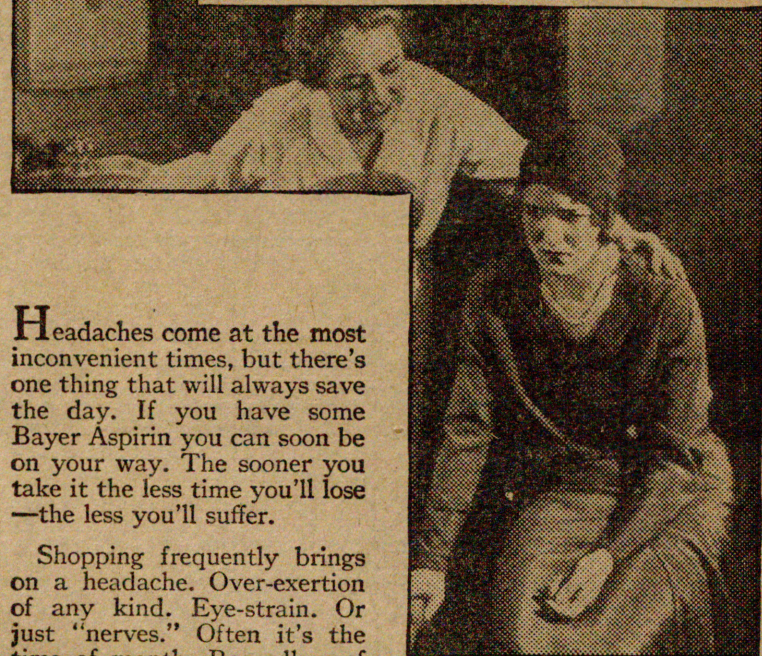

Interest earned on money collected and deposited during the quarter ending September 30 by Secretary of State William J. Stratton amounted to $3,475.22, which has now been paid into the state treasury.

BAYER ASPIRIN

Odd War Memorial Made From Scrap Metal Pile

A curious memorial to an officer of the World War is to be seen at Tisbury, in England, in the shape of a clock made entirely of scrap metal and it is now doing duty in the parish church. It is the work of a resident. There are two weights which consist of assortments of old iron. They are wound up by a windlass which previously worked a canal lock. The driving wheel came from a winnowing machine; and the face, now in the church tower, was made from pieces of old oak and deal. Other parts of the works are made from the remains of a spade, a bean drill and a plowshare. The first model refused to go, so the builder smashed it with a hammer. Then he started his task all over again, and this time he has been successful.

WOMEN SHOULD LEARN USES OF MAGNESIA

To women who suffer from nausea, or so-called "morning sickness," this is a blessing. Most nurses know it. It is advised by leading specialists: Over a small quantity of finely cracked ice pour a teaspoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Sip slowly until you are relieved. It ends sick stomach or inclination to vomit. Its anti-acid properties make Phillips' Milk of Magnesia quick relief in heartburn, sour stomach, gas. Its mild laxative action assures regular bowel movement. Used as a mouth-wash it helps prevent tooth decay during expectancy.

Can't PLAY
Can't REST
—child needs Castoria

WHEN a child is fretful and irritable, seems distressed and uncomfortable, can't play, can't sleep, it is a pretty sure sign that something is wrong. Right here is where Castoria fits into a child's scheme—the very purpose for which it was formulated years ago! A few drops and the condition which caused the trouble is righted; comfort quickly brings restful sleep.

Nothing can take the place of Castoria for children; it's perfectly harmless, yet always effective. For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an every-day aid. Its gentle action will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. In more liberal doses it will

Am I Fat?—Not Me

Yes! A year ago I had twenty-two more pounds of fat than I needed—I was fat—and very sensitive about it—but now I say it is foolish for anyone to be overweight. What did I do? Nothing very hard, I can assure you—I cut out pies—candy and all sweets—at moderate and every morning before breakfast I took one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water—Never missed a morning.

I lost fat—gained in energy—vigorous—charm—and vivaciousness and have a shapely figure I am proud of—anyone can do the same.

A North Carolina woman lost 47 pounds in 3 months—a Montana woman lost 19 pounds in 4 weeks—Wisconsin woman 11 pounds in 6 weeks.

Every druggist in the world sells Kruschen Salts—a Bottle that lasts 4 weeks—costs 85 cents.

Indians Feature Chicago Day Program In Forest Preserve

It was Indian summer, Chicago Day, October 9th when the Garden, Conservation and Indian Welfare departments of the Illinois Federation of Womens Clubs of the Third District, gathered in the forest preserve at 123rd and Kean ave., for a Campfire luncheon and program arranged by Mrs. Wallace B. Combs who is garden chairman for the 36 clubs. There was a roaring fire awaiting the cars as they rolled into the forest when the sun had reached the meridian. The odor of coffee arose and the scent of roasted wienies. It was a merry, happy gathering around the long tables at which were seated the honored guests important in their respective contacts in civic, social and community service with Chieftains Chibiaboos and Whirling Thunder as the center of attraction.

When the cooking and eating were over and the smoke of the campfire arose in grey, fluffy clouds to meet the yellow and gold of the beautiful autumn surroundings of the forest preserve, the program opened. Mrs. Combs welcomed the large assembly, who had met to greet representatives of America's first citizens; America's first gardeners; saying it was the Indians who first tilled America's soil and who showed the colonists how to cultivate tobacco, corn, and squash and other vegetables. Mrs. Fred Waterman, president of District No. 3 was introduced, and in her welcoming remarks she likened the Federation to a vast beautiful garden, with the yellows for intelligence, blue for faithfulness, white for purity of purpose and green as background for harmony. Mrs. Ben Butties, chairman of conservation then exhibited articles made by Indians in the Canadian reservation. They were articles of art and exquisite workmanship.

The important part of the program was then presented in the introduction of Chiefs Chibiaboos and Whirling Thunder. Chibiaboos is a Chippewa Indian from Turtle Mountain, N. D., and is a graduate of Haskell Indian school. As a part of his program he appeared fully clothed in beaded moccasins and suit with his eagle feather head dress touching the ground. A six footer, this chief made an imposing picture. He sang "Zuni Indian Sunset Song" and "My Minnesota" the latter being his own composition. He also gave a reading from Lew Saretto's "Slow Smoke"—namely "Little Caribow Makes Big Talk."

Whirling Thunder is a Winnebago from Wisconsin, a member of the highest clan of his tribe and directly descended from old tribal head chiefs. He holds the hereditary chieftainship. As a part of his program he was dressed in the beaded chief's suit of his tribe. He gave the "Brave Heart Dance". This is an old ceremonial dance now seldom seen, was the dance performed by the young brave upon his initiation into the Warrior Society. He also demonstrated the Indian sign language, the old gesture language in universal use among the Plains Indians who could not speak the same language; he sang an old Winnebago "Greeting" song always sung at gatherings of warrior bands when meeting together after seasonable migrations or upon meeting another tribe. Mr. Ramsod Kennicott, Chief Forester of Cook County gave an interesting account of Indian trails still in use in Palos. He spoke of the life and habits of America's first people as they trailed the forests trapping and hunting, pitching their wigwams along some trout streams. Mr. Kennicott is desperate in his efforts to have these trails and the forests guarded and preserved as a monument to a race fast disappearing.

The Palos Park Woman's Club were hostess to this affair furnishing the coffee for all. The school was closed for the afternoon to afford the children the privilege of this unusual program. Children from Tinley Park were present and many members of the Tinley Park Garden club who were special guests of the day.

Fire Destroys Poultry Farm; $8000 Loss

Fire destroyed the house and chicken coops on the Jennings Poultry farm, 52nd ave. and 147th st. at 3 a. m. Saturday. When the family awakened the house was in flames; Mrs. Way tried to get the Midlothian Fire Department, but the line was out of order. She barely had time to get out of the house. A child had a narrow escape, part of the rafters falling into the crib just after the child had been taken from it.

The coops caught from the blazing house and 750 chickens burned. The Blue Island department came too late to be of any assistance. The loss is estimated at $8,000.

It is thought that if the phone had been open to the local department, the poultry houses could have been saved. Most of the telephones in Midlothian were out of service from Thursday evening until Saturday evening—some were still out of commission Sunday—to the great inconvenience of local business men. Mr. Eddy, district manager in Harvey, stated that the trouble was due to several "sorts" in the local cable and that men were working on it continuously.

Believe Attempt Made to Kidnap Midlothian Boy

As Buddy Moore was returning from school Monday afternoon on 147 st., just west of the village, a man pulled his car up in front of him, pushed open the door almost in his face and hollered "get in". Bud ran the man following.

Mr. Kunkle of Oak Forest, whose car was stalled near by, witnessed the incident and Bud ran to him for protection. Seeing Mr. Kunkle the man hurriedly got into his car and drove rapidly away. Mr. Kunkle could not pursue him, so he got away.

According to the boy, the man was about 5½ feet tall and red faced. He is said to have had a gun.

Coach Rockne on Lyric Program This Week

The second of a series of talks and illustrations of the great game of football will be shown at the Lyric Theatre Friday and Saturday. This added attraction features one of the most celebrated coaches of all time and is exemplified by one of the worlds most famous teams. The Coach is Knute Rockne and the team is The Notre Dame Football eleven.

In the series which comprises six subjects, one of which will be shown each week Rockne discusses the technicalities of the game, likewise explains many of the features which characterize the best known teams. While he speaks two Notre Dame teams, The Varsity and another eleven enact the plays which Rockne discusses.

Slow motion camera work is used in many instances so that the audience will see every detail of the play as illustrated by the teams.

The series show the cleverness of the forward pass as executed by the Army, the Navy, Southern California and other well known teams. Correct punting is also discussed and illustrated. The hidden ball is exemplified and famous plays by celebrated grid stars are re-enacted.

Thus the Knute Rockne series which the Lyric Theatre will present every week for six weeks is one of the most interesting subjects which the living screen has brought to audiences in the history of talking pictures.

Whether spectators are interested in football, or not, they cannot help but be inspired and entertained by this very unusual and exciting series of Grid battles, while Rockne the most celebrated and experienced of coaches proves today an equally interesting personage as presented via the talking screen.

Rin-Tin-Tin, in "The Lone Defender", will continue to delight the kiddies at their matinee Saturday.

"Romance" on Monday and Tuesday, features Greta Garbo appearing in her second all-talking picture. It is the love story of Bishop Armstrong and Cavallini, an opera singer.

"Anybodys Woman", coming Wednesday and Thursday, stars Ruth Chatterton and Clive Brook.

Bremen Township Health Topics

Eleanor Gallagher, R. N.
Rural Nursing Service of Cook Co.

The entire staff of rural nurses and about thirty township supervisors of rural Cook county made a tour of inspection of the county institutions at Oak Forest Wednesday, October 15th and was agreeably surprised at the splendid condition that exists there. In spite of the lack of funds during the past year, if thrift and economy practiced there were used in the home, there would be fewer inmates of the institution. They have about 4,000 to care for at the present time.

There has been a question as to the purity of the water from the McIntosh water supply presented to the village board, and again a sample has been sent to Springfield to be analyzed. There seems to be a lack of understanding as to the rules and regulations for having water analyzed by the state laboratory; the state does not analyze water for private individuals, as water coming from the water supply of a private home. The sample must be drawn from a source where 25 or more persons drink daily or weekly, thereby rendering it a public drinking place. The water however, comes from the McIntosh water supply and if an individual has trouble with their own supply this may be due to a faulty joint in their own water pipe and would therefore be their own private affair.

Where Is Full Dinner Pail? Demos Ask

Flushed by the brightest prospects of victory in years and spurred on by the largest Democratic rally ever held in Blue Island, the Democratic war horses ripped and tore into their adversaries last Saturday night.

During the course of the meeting at least three thousand stopped, listened and sampled the refreshments. Eagles hall where the meeting was held was filled to capacity at all times and for a while standing room was at a premium.

The drum and bugle corps of the Blue Island post of the American Legion opened the meeting with patriotic airs. The Blue Island Liederkranz carried on and brought down the house with a Teutonic accent and a varied assortment of songs.

The full dinner pail and prohibition were the targets of practically every Democratic orator and every volley provoked applause.

"For forty years," said Clayton F. Smith, "the full dinner pail has been waved before voters by Republicans at election time. This year it is hanging in the closet of defunct slogans. In silence stand hot shots of Republicanism. Gone is their pet bromide; shattered is the keystone of their campaigns. Ten thousand petty trifles are left them to draw from but not one is of any account to the thinking voter."

"Yes, gone is the full dinner pail; gone with the prosperity that lingered for nine years, an aftermath of the halcyon days of Woodrow Wilson."

"Wilson prosperity, too strong to be killed overnight aided for nine long years the raiders of Treasury Hill and the oil men of the Grand Old Party but they killed the Goose of the golden eggs, they watered the nectar of prosperity till it ceased to be and now they chatter in vain against the tidal wave that will wipe them out the first Tuesday of November."

Prohibition was consigned to the limbo of outworn fads by Sheriff John E. Traeger and his audience approved with gusto. Blue Island lived up to its wet reputation. Demands for the return of beer and light wines left the gathering in smiles.

"They say there are a few thousand saloons in the country towns," Traeger declared, "and the sheriff has not lifted a finger to abolish them."

"I answer that with the handful of men at our disposal we are very fortunate there are not five thousand saloons."

"And if we had the men we would still be helpless for so long as a majority of the people want beer so long will there be men willing to engage in the beer trade. Though we may blot out one two will arise in his place."

"The only remedy is to erase prohibition from the statute books and thereby erase these sore spots from our villages and towns."

William D. Meyering, war hero and municipal leader was greeted with frenzied applause.

Among the other speakers were superintendent of schools Tobin, Judge Henry Homer, Edward Kelly and Walter Meyers.

Responsible for much of the meetings success were John Clark and Louis DeRudder of Midlothian who did yeoman service for the Bremen Township Democratic club. Frank Mech, Posen committeeman led a large contingent of his fellow villagers.

Smashing and twisting his way through right tackle, Gallati of the Comets came through 35 yards of Demon defence to bring the only touchdown of what threatened to be a scoreless tie. The turning point came in the last few minutes of the third quarter, after both teams had battled their way back and forth down the field. The Demons showed a remarkable improvement over last Sunday, including some flashy tackling by Nelson, playing right end. The back-field, however, was somewhat weakened by the loss of Stevenson and Brisset, who are out of the lineup due to injuries received in previous games.

The some 300 Midlothian adherents who turned out to witness the game, hugely enjoyed themselves in spite of the defeat they suffered and one football veteran was heard to remark that it was the hardest fought game he had seen in years.

Next Sunday the Demons meet the Govians a fast moving Chicago team. Take it upon yourself to come out and lend your moral support to the home team. We expect to see Brisset and Stevenson back in the game and Doug Flaws will also be back in a week or two.

A new addition to the team was publicly announced Sunday in the person of Mr. H. C. Hulbert, who has assumed the duties of coach, following the resignation of Donald Wright. Don't forget next Sunday.

"House That Jack Built" Has Nothing on the One Frank Built

There is an old gag about the shoemaker's children going barefoot. We have grown accustomed to barbers that go with hair untrimmed, milkmen who do not drink milk and so on.

So we listened with some skepticism to rumors that an electrician in Midlothian had used his skill to make a "house of magic" of his own home.

So, bumping into Frank Lilly, we invited ourselves over to his house. (We newspaper men have an "editorial license, giving us admission everywhere—that is where we can get away with it). So we followed Frank to his house on 44th ave. (or is it Kostner ave?) From the outside the house, although a very nice place did not look different from any other.

However, as we reached the door, Mr. Lilly switched on the porch light from the outside, turning it off from inside the house.

Then we learned that each door has a "3 way" switch, so you may turn on the light as you go into a room and off as you leave by another door.

In the kitchen we found a telephone electric clock, an electric dish washer (Mrs. Lilly says "that is the best thing in the house") and, in the pantry, a Kelvinator with a dry vegetable compartment in the bottom. Of course there was a large and small ironing board folding up into a wall recess. Both kitchen and bathroom have rubber tile floors.

In each room there are three baseboard plugs; in the living room

Seize Men in Arson Attempt in Blue Island

Four men and a woman were arrested Monday night, charged with a plot to burn a vacant apartment at 13224 Western ave. The men arrested were: Frank Ricci, 47, of Dixmoor, Antonis Chiarito, 2266 Grove st., Blue Island; Tony Sinise, and Pasquale Granolla owner of the building.

Mrs. Florence Carriere, 12804 Winchester ave., was seized after she paid $150 to two undercover men for the alleged purpose of having her husband killed.

Two of the men were arrested as they started to carry four five-gallon tins of gasoline and black powder into the building.

According to Chief Fiedler of Blue Island the "tip" came from a hobo who had been fed and given shelter in the Blue Island station.

Sproul Declares Radicals Responsible for Hard Times

The postmasters and postal employees of the third congressional district under the chairmanship of Postmaster Sutton of Harvey attended a dinner to Congressman Elliott W. Sproul, Wednesday night at the Elks Hall in Blue Island.

One hundred and fifty heard the Congressman speak on his record in the House. Others addressing the gathering were County Commissioner John Jaranowski, Mayor Frank Kasten, Ex-Mayor Klenk and George Langraf.

Mr. Sproul, who only recently obtained a new postoffice for Midlothian over the protest that the revenue here was insufficient for larger quarters, explained the present hard times as the result of Democratic and Radical Republican opposition to the tariff bill.

Borah, Brookhart, Nye, Norris and LaFollette, according to him, tied up the special session of Congress in 1929 which Hoover called at their prayer. Discouraged by the delays in the passage of a tariff bill manufacturers slowed down production, unemployment increased and the stock panic followed.

Those who believe the Democrats can restore prosperity Sproul believes are as hopelessly wrong as those who think Henry Ford a friend of the working man.

Of Ford the Congressman said, "When the stock market crashed President Hoover called together the financiers and captains of industry to plan for the prevention of a panic. Henry Ford leaving that meeting told a reporter he would do his bit by raising the wages of every worker in his plants a dollar a day. He did that. But in the dead of winter he laid off a hundred thousand men."

"Not more wages but more work was what he should have given his men. The work was not at hand because Ford had moved his tractor factory to Cork, Ireland and was manufacturing seventy-five million dollars worth of automobiles in Germany."

Concerning the low tariff Sproul said, "It is not going to do the American citizen any good if prices come down because of the free entry of cheap foreign made goods. Competing with American manufacturers. Low prices are of no avail if the worker because of unemployment cannot afford to buy them."

There will be a social meeting of the Woman's Club at their club house today with Mrs. E. J. Dillon and Mrs. Addie Briggs as hostesses.

Legion Holds Installation on Saturday

Colorful ceremonies marked the installation of the new officers of Midlothian Post 691 at Elks Hall, Blue Island, Saturday evening. Ex-Commander Kenneth Sidell told the audience what the Legion had meant to him, of the splendid feeling of comradeship it developed among the ex-service men, and thanked his co-workers for their assistance in making the past year a memorable one in the history of the Midlothian post. Then he handed the gavel to the new commander, Edgar Spoerer.

Frank Foster of Harvey gave a short talk, and so did William D. Meyering, who was introduced as one of America's greatest war heroes. The Roger Sullivan post drum and bugle corps furnished music that made one long for another war.

Following the installation the Legion gave a dance and "feed", which were enjoyed by a crowd which packed the hall to capacity.

Board Meets to Consider Drainage

A committee of the East End Development association, N. Znei-mer, Frank Allen and L. R. Burdett, reported to the village board Friday evening on the results of an open meeting of the association held the previous night. According to the committee the McIntosh residents wanted the drainage project put through, providing that certain specifications were met.

From the report that the field engineer made to them, they believe that the plan is feasible and will at least drain the pater from the crown of the road and from the lots. Water will drain out on 147th, 143rd, Abbottsford road and Kedzie ave. The work will cost about $8 a lot and will come out of the "cushion" in the sidewalk assessment.

The committee claimed that the contractor has made a "botch" job of removing the fill, taking it where convenient to him and leaving hollows for water to accumulate. He took, they claim, all the dirt from the parking strip on 147th. So the drainage project is made necessary.

In case the board goes ahead, they asked that all plans and specifications be made a matter of record, so there could be no dispute as in the case of the fill, which was supposed to be so removed that the water would drain off.

Private culverts, unless meeting the matter of a building ordinance was brought up, the East End representatives urging action. They were told that a joint meeting would be arranged with the Lions committee in the very near future. The meeting, incidentally, was held with no fire in the stove and the board sitting in overcoats and hats. It was adjourned until Monday night.

Monday night the board met with the fire department to discuss the latter's constitution and by-laws.

The Village Board at a special meeting Wednesday night rejected the drainage proposals for the McIntosh subdivision as too expensive. It was decided to clean out the tile system at present in use.

A quorum was not present and the meeting adjourned to the next regular meeting.

Lions Adopt Constitution; Have Social Meet

A constitution and by-laws were adopted by the Lions Club of Midlothian Monday night. The first article of the by-laws reads: "This club at no time shall endorse or recommend any candidate for political office, nor shall politics or political candidates be discussed at the meetings. Also no religious discussion should be tolerated at the meetings."

With 40 business men as members and only ten more to be taken in before charter night, the membership list was closed. Henceforth applications will have to go through the regular channels.

Chairman Moore appointed a committee, consisting of Walter Dole, Ed Searle and Gordon Adler, to investigate the feasibility of a "community chest" for Midlothian, to take care of the needy and aid worth-while causes.

A finance committee, Clarence Mills, Nelson Fetters (the "Fixer") and Roger Mason, was also appointed. By way of entertainment, Walter Erickson exposed the "Cutting-up kid", Ben Schroeder. Andrews told of some little known incidents in the life of George Baerlin and Stegebauer told how Wm. Nagel kept the slate out of his coal.

At the next meeting Clare Moore will receive the same sort of rough handling from Ruddle Grill, Ed Reimer will hear from Morton, and Donato from Dole.

The entertainment committee served their usual "bang-up" luncheon and sent the crowd home singing "Sweet Adeline".

Unless the members are more careful to address their fellows as "Lion" instead of "Mister", there will be enough dimes in the treasury to feed all Midlothian.

Characteristic Punches From Peter McCarthy

Sometime ago the Golden Rule Magazine of Chicago ran a wonderful article on the famous Morning Star Mission and its equally famous founder, Peter McCarthy, both of Joliet. Following are a few excerpts taken from an article headed: "Characteristic Punches from Pete McCarthy":

You must dry human tears with human needs.

Every human soul is the same in the sight of God.

It's awful unkind to call a human soul a bum! The worst you can say is he is a "tourist" or lost soul.

It's pretty hard to interest a man in his soul while that man is shivering from cold and hungry for food.

In the blackest heart is a better life and God's great love thru Jesus Christ will bring it to light.

One of the greatest pords in the English language is helpfulness, and faith in God will make you a helper.

One of the greatest words in the world is doubt. God can't use a doubting soul. And one of the greatest neglects is neglect of devotional prayer—the prayer of faith. Never forget to pray!

Something is the matter and we have the formula—men find themselves through the gospel.

The Law is a Key and the Gospel is a Key. The law is the key that locks the sinner up—and the gospel is the key that unlocks and sets the sinner free.

Some people pray and swear, some people pray and lie, and some people pray and steal. I say if you want to swear, swear the truth; if you want to lie, lie in your own bed; if you want to steal, steal away from bad company.

The gospel fits every need—love for the heart, knowledge for the head, and guidance for the feet. I have seen it make drunkards sober, wife-beaters tender hearted, and thieves honest. It never fails—all it needs is a chance.

For over eighteen years we have led one or more souls a day to Christ; a soul a day keeps the devil away!

Jesus turns monkeys into men. I've learned so much about people these twenty years—the main thing is that there's good in everybody.

I wouldn't change places with the head of the biggest corporation in America.

I graduated from grammar school, high school where I won a scholarship to college from which I was graduated with a B. A. Degree. I have always participated in various athletics, particularly baseball, basketball and golf.

On leaving college I was employed by the International Harvester Company in their accounting department. I continued my studies at night, specializing in accountancy, for two years.

In a memorandum to the Secretary of War, Major General Robert C. Davis said:

"Captain Meyering was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross May 30th, 1918, for extraordinary heroism in action while commanding his platoon during an attack by the enemy on April 6th, 1918. He took effective measures before and during the attack to defeat the enemy and handled his men well under fire until the injury which resulted in the loss of his right hand. He refused assistance and walked thru the enemy's barrage to a dressing station. He objected to being taken to the rear till he knew the outcome of the attack. By his brave example he inspired his men to drive off the enemy who did not reach our trenches. He was also awarded the Croix De Guerre with Gilt Star by the French Government for his actions on April 6th, 1918."

Returning to civil life I was handicapped to continue my previous occupation and went to Montana and Wyoming and filed a homestead claim. Returning to Chicago I studied law at the University of Chicago for one year and then returned to the International Harvester Company filling various positions preparatory to sales work. Resigned from their employ to associate myself in the insurance business with McKee & Poague.

My first association in politics was in 1923 when I was elected President of the "Dever for Mayor Ex-Service Men's League" and during my association with this cause I decided to run for alderman of the Eighth Ward. I was elected and have been re-elected on three other occasions and now am a member of the City Council from this ward. My record in the City Council has at all times been acceptable to the press of Chicago as well as to the Municipal Voters' League and other organizations who make endorsements for political offices.

When the legislature created a commission to investigate the tax situation in Illinois and to recommend to its session beginning in January next apt laws to reduce the cost of government, reduce and equalize the tax burden the Governor was empowered to select three members of that body. He chose from Cook County Mr. Harrison Riley and Senator Arthur A. Huebsch. The members of the commission promptly selected Senator Huebsch chairman.

It is generally conceded that no new member of the State Senate had been extended so great an honor nor been entrusted with so important a post.

Under the leadership of Senator Huebsch that commission has prepared and will submit to the next legislature as thorough and comprehensive a report upon the subject as could be made. Its publication is awaited with the greatest interest. That it will result in substantial economies in public finance and reduce inequalities in taxation is confidently expected, for Senator Huebsch is regarded as an authority on the subject, is an able debator and is tireless in his endeavors to root out and overcome opposition and obstacles to substantial tax reform.

*Mark last Monday on your calendar in red. On that eventful day R. K. Cumming began the practice of giving away a book of matches with each package of cigarettes sold

A poster on Kean Avenue, announcing a sale at the Studnicka farm near Willow Springs, advertises "Bulls, one three years old, one eight months old, balance giving good supply of milk."

The gentleman seen swan diving into a pile of clothing at the Legion installation was Roy G. Andrews looking for his cap.

A headline that might have been:
Posen Mushroom Hunters
Go Out For Big Game

The reason being the recent drive made by the Posen chief of police on those two redoubtable Lions, Messrs. Moore and Erickson. The former was his usual crafty self and escaped the snare, his assistant, George Way being captured instead. Or should we say — Way-laid.

Among others captured lately was Kevin McCann of the Messenger who, not once or twice, but thrice during the present month felt the strong arm of the law in the persons of Officer Harry Holman of Robbins, Officer Frawley of Chicago and some unknown with an illegible signature who only yesterday tagged the Greyhound of the Gravel with an arrest slip while the associate editor was imbibing a Cherry Coke.

Unless Mr. Andrews' cap is found very shortly he will have to get a haircut so that the pre-war hat Al Clifton gave him will fit.

Uncle Casey wishes to warn all forgers in this village that his name has been copyrighted and anyone using it in a letter to the editor may come in conflict with the law.

As an outstanding example of foresight we may mention the case of Chief A. A. Terry, who foreseeing a long, cold winter in the roadster parked at 147th and Crawford, purchased the Manor House from whose windows he may guard our chief intersection and remain comfortably warm.

One of Midlothian's young hopefuls suggests that if its oil, smoke, and coal-dust are taken into consideration the City of Whiting would be more properly named Blacking.

WHO'S WHO

The subject for dissection this week is Frank Allen who will forever be remembered for his quaint remark after his Ford collided with an automobile.

Having excavated himself from the wreckage and making sure a Conservative party publicity man was within hearing, he said, "Life has become so perilous, it's a wonder we live to reach the grave."

Mr. Allen is on public exposition five nights a week on the 5:35 train from the Loop. He may be easily recognized by his suspended position which he maintains by hooking one ear and part of his neck on the top of one seat and his toes on the top of another. Very shortly a petition will be circulated asking the Rock Island to furnish a hammock for Mr. Allen's greater ease in suspension.

The smoke which issues from Mr. Allen's mouth during the trip home is due, not to his pipe, but to the caustic criticisms of the Goodfellowship club in which he indulges.

As he has been a McIntosh water drinker for some time Mr. Allen's hair has assumed a reddish hue. The first gentleman to call this to his attention by the use of the nickname "Red" was taken to Oak Forest.

When an interviewer visited Mr. Allen at his home in the East End wilds he found the Conservative philosopher skipping lightly among the w. k. thistles of that district with a microscope in one hand and a daisy in the other. Questioned as to whether he had taken up botany, he tittered in reply, — "Oh gracious, No! I've started a private detective agency and my first assignment is to find Mr. Andrews' cap."

When Two "Long Knives" Reached the "Big Water" Toward the Setting Sun

SITE OF FORT CLATSOP, NEAR ASTORIA, OREGON

WILLIAM CLARK (Painting by Peale)

ROUTE OF LEWIS AND CLARK TO OREGON AND RETURN

MERIWETHER LEWIS (Painting by Peale)

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IT WAS just 125 years ago that two young Americans reached the goal of a 2,000-mile trail-blazing expedition through a vast wilderness and came to the half-way mark of what has been aptly called a "magnificent adventure." For it was on November 7, 1805, that Meriwether Lewis and William Clark, captains of the "Long Knives" and the first white men to ascend the Missouri river to its source and to descend the Columbia river to the Pacific ocean, first caught sight of the "Big Water Toward the Setting Sun" which for so many months had beckoned them on.

The story of the Lewis and Clark expedition is not only one of the great romances of American history, but it is an exploring epic of all time. In the early days of the American republic, the Mississippi river was not only the western boundary of the new nation, but it was also the "jumping-off place" into an unknown almost as mysterious as that which confronted Columbus when he set the sails of his caravels to voyage across the Atlantic. True, a few French traders and venturesome American trappers had gone up the Mississippi to the country of the Sioux and Mandans and there had heard vague tales of the regions beyond from other traders who had ventured south or southwesterly from the Canadian empire where the British fur companies reigned. True, in 1792 Capt. Robert Gray of the ship Columbia out of Boston had "blundered into the harbor of a vast river flowing into the Pacific" and had called this river after his ship.

But what lay between the mouth of the Missouri and the mouth of the Columbia was practically unknown to the white man. They knew vaguely that there was a vast area of grassy plains, but what lay beyond them was not even guessed at. The Rocky mountains were not known to exist, although under the name of "Stonies," their northern extensions in the part of America held by the British, appeared on some maps. But where was that first thin trickle which grew larger and larger as it wound its way south, finally to pour the waters of the "Big Muddy" into the "Father of Waters" above the old French town of St. Louis? No one knew!

Then Napoleon Bonaparte, planning another war with Great Britain, a war in which he would need a great amount of money, and realizing that the "Mistress of the Seas" could readily seize and hold the vast territory of Louisiana, France's only territory in America, decided upon a double-edged stroke at his hated enemy. He would sell Louisiana to the Americans. President Thomas Jefferson, holding his ideal of a nation that should be as broad as the continent, a republic under one flag from ocean to ocean, was quick to see the opportunity. So the Louisiana Purchase, "the biggest real estate deal in history" was made. Napoleon got his $15,000,000 and the infant republic doubled its expanse overnight.

Even before the purchase treaty was signed, Jefferson was planning the audacious enterprise of exploring the wilderness which lay between the Mississippi and the Pacific. He had been disturbed by the reports that the English were planning an expedition to study the geography of the western coast and possibly to colonize it. In January, 1803, he had secured from congress a secret promise to send a party of ten men across what was still French territory to explore the Missouri river "and whatever river, heading with that, runs into the western sea."

For the leader of this expedition Jefferson had chosen his secretary, red-headed young Meriwether Lewis, a twenty-seven-year-old Virginian who had already made his mark as a soldier under "Mad Anthony" Wayne. Lewis in turn selected another Virginian, his friend William Clark, brother of George Rogers Clark, the conqueror of the old Northwest during the Revolution, as his second in command and substitute commander in case of need. Both were commissioned captains in the regular army. Lewis had already begun his preparations for the journey when Louisiana was surrendered to the American commissioner in April, 1803.

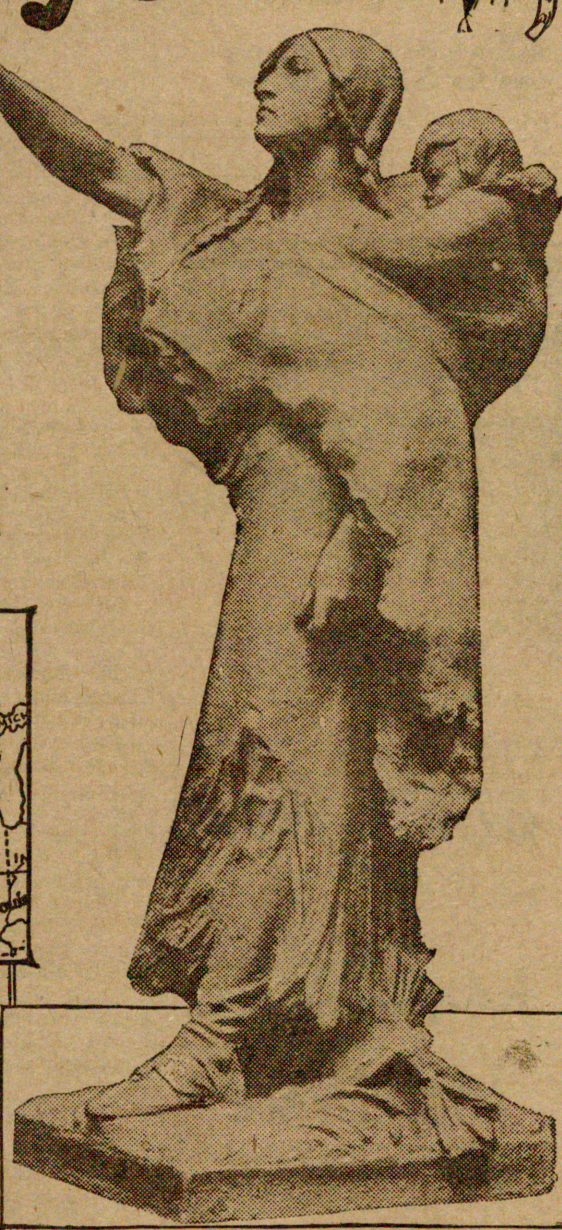

In the fall of 1803 Captain Lewis went to the mouth of Wood river near St. Louis and there on the soil of Illinois established headquarters and began raising his force of picked men. The party was to number 45 men and during all that winter the young commander "hardened the men to rigid discipline, superintended the building of boats and the making of arms, accoutrements, scientific apparatus and all equipments."

On May 14, 1804, the expedition set out in three boats up the Missouri. At the prow of the main boat, a bateau 55 feet long, manned by 22 oars, floated the American flag. The other boats were open pirogues with about six oars each. Horses were led along the bank by members of the party for daily use of the hunters and for emergencies if attacked by Indians. On May 22 the explorers had their first contact with the Indians, a party of Kickapoos, who gave them four deer on Good Man's river. It was not until more than a month later—June 26—that they reached the present site of Kansas City—43 days in crossing the state of Missouri, a journey which can now be made overnight. Here the explorers held a council with the Kansas Indians and here for the first time they saw buffalo.

On July 21 they reached the mouth of the Platte river and their dangers began. Heretofore the Indians whom they had met were friendly, but the tribes who lived beyond this point were an unknown quantity. As a part of their duty, as outlined by Jefferson, they next dispatched messengers with gifts to the Pawnee and Otoe villages to the west, inviting the chiefs to a council on a bluff on the present site of Calhoun, Neb., called Council Bluffs (not Council Bluffs, Iowa). The council was held on August 3 and after giving the chiefs gifts of various sorts received their assurance of a friendly attitude toward the whites. The only death in the party during the entire expedition took place at this time—that of Sergt. Charles Floyd, who was buried on the top of a bluff which still bears his name, a short distance below Sioux City, Iowa.

The explorers were now coming to the territory of the Sioux, Indians noted for their ferocity and treachery. However, Lewis and Clark held successful councils with the Yankton Sioux on August 30 and with the Teton Sioux on September 24. Within the next month they had reached the country of the Arikaras, Mandans and Minnetares. Here they decided to spend the winter, and near the present site of Bismarck, N. D., they established a post which they called Fort Mandan.

By this time they had come 1,600 miles and during their journey they had kept records of all they had seen. During the winter they worked on their reports, the first written records of this region that had ever been made, and when spring opened the next year a detachment of 14 men was chosen to carry this report back to President Jefferson. On April 7 the party left Fort Mandan, having built new canoes and laid up a large supply of provisions, mainly pemmican, the dried meat of buffalo. The party now numbered 32, occupying six canoes and two pirogues. The canoes were made from green cottonwood, the only material available and although it was scarcely suitable for the purpose yet it is a part of Lewis and Clark's brilliant achievement that they traversed over 1,000 miles of the roughest water of the Missouri in such makeshift craft as these.

STATUE OF SAKAKAWEA (by Alice Cooper)

The departure from Fort Mandan was marked by another high spot in the history of the expedition. For it was there that they engaged a half-breed, Chaboneau, as guide and interpreter. With this man went his Indian wife, Sakakawea, the "Bird Woman," a captive from the Snake Indians of the Rockies. American history might have been different in many respects if the lives of this Indian girl and the two young Virginians had not been joined on the plains of North Dakota 125 years ago. It was Sakakawea who told them of the "shining mountains" which lay beyond and on May 26, 1805, Meriwether Lewis climbed to the top of a high cliff and for the first time a white man looked upon those mountains.

The difficulties of the party were constantly increasing. The river had become too deep for poles and too swift for paddles, so they were forced to pull the boats upstream with tow lines.

Despite all of the handicaps under which they were laboring the expedition pushed on. On July 19 they entered the "Gates of the Rockies" and six days later Captain Clark discovered the three forks of the Missouri to which he gave the names of three American statesmen—Jefferson, Madison and Gallatin.

Continuing on their journey on August 12 they came to a fountain or spring from which icy water trickled. This was the headwater of the mighty Missouri, one of the goals of their adventuring in the wilderness. Three-quarters of a mile further on they found what they described as a "bold creek" running to the west. It was the Lemhi river, a branch of the Columbia. From now on it was essentially a "down hill" journey, although their further wayfaring was to be in some of the roughest country on the American continent. Then, too, a new danger suddenly appeared. They came into contact with the Shoshone Indians whose hostile attitude was changed to friendliness when Sakakawea recognized the chief, Camaswait, as her brother whom she had not seen since she had been stolen from the Snakes (Shoshones) several years before.

Assured now of supplies, which had become a serious problem as the scarcity of game increased, the Americans bought horses from the Shoshones and continued their westward way. Crossing the foothills they reached a village of Nez Perce Indians who gave them fish and camas root to eat. Finding the river here navigable, they hollowed logs with fire, and purchasing from the Indians as many dogs (for food) as they could carry, the explorers set sail down the Kootenai or Clearwater river. On October 16 they reached the mouth of the Snake river and floated out into the Columbia. Their journey on these westward flowing waters had been a strenuous one. Repeatedly their canoes were upset in the whirlpools or crashed into rocks. Much of their baggage was lost. With virtually nothing to eat except dog meat and the roots which Sakakawea taught them were edible, they were hungry and weary and lacking in nearly everything but a strong resolution to go on. So they sailed on down the Columbia and on November 7 their courage was rewarded. For on that date they first caught sight of the Pacific—"that ocean, the object of all our labors; the reward of all our anxieties. This cheering view exhilarated the spirits of the party who were still more delighted on hearing the distant roar of breakers." They had been gone from St. Louis more than 18 months, they had covered by land and by water, through perils of every description, more than 4,000 miles.

After spending the winter in a rude fortification named Fort Clatsop they set out on March 23, 1806, to retrace their steps eastward. The journey which had taken them 18 months to complete took them six months to return. On September 23 they arrived at St. Louis to receive the congratulations of their fellow Americans and to find their names permanently enrolled among the great adventurers of the world.

Lesson for October 26

SPIRITUAL WEAPONS IN A WORLD WAR
(World's Temperance Lesson)

LESSON TEXT—Galatians 5:13-26.
GOLDEN TEXT—And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Learning Self-Control.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Law in One Word.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Secret of Self-Control.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Making Prohibition Effective and Permanent.

The lesson topic is not a happy one. The Scripture text chosen clearly refers to the inner conflict going on in the believer. Having been born of the flesh and of the Spirit (John 3:6), there is an unceasing conflict going on between the two natures (Gal. 5:17). The insurrection springing out of the carnal nature cannot be put down by the Law of Moses. Victory can only be accomplished through the energy of the indwelling Holy Spirit.

The committee has further designated it "a temperance lesson." It has a real bearing on temperance in that it shows the only way to destroy the infernal liquor business; namely, to lead individuals to a personal knowledge and experience of Jesus Christ.

Having in Galatians 3 and 4 shown that the believer is free from the law as a means of justification, Paul makes practical application of this doctrine as follows:

1. Christian Freedom (vv. 13-15).
It is not an occasion to the "flesh" (v. 13).

Liberty is not license. The notion that when one is free from the law he is free from constraint, is wickedly erroneous. License of the flesh means not merely the indulgence of the flesh in actual material sins, but in the expression of a self-centered life (v. 15).
2. By love serving one another (v. 13).

Freedom from the Mosaic law means slavery to the law of love. Love thus becomes the fulfillment of the law—"Love thy neighbor as thyself" (v. 14).

11. Walking in the Spirit (vv. 16-18).
Walking in the Spirit results in:

1. Loving service to others.

2. Victory over the flesh (vv. 16, 17).

By the "flesh" is meant the corrupt nature of man expressing itself in the realm of sense and self.

11. The Works of the Flesh (vv. 19-21).

By works of the flesh is meant the operation of the carnal nature. The one who chooses to live according to the impulses and desires of his natural heart will be practicing the following sins:

1. Sensuality (v. 19).

The sins enumerated here, practiced in the sphere of the body, are:
(1) Fornication. Fornication includes all sexual sins in married and unmarried life.

(2) Uncleanness. This includes all sensual sins, open or secret, in thought or deed.

(3) Lasciviousness. This means the wanton, reckless indulgences in the shameful practices of the flesh.

2. Irreligion (v. 20).

These acts take place in the realm of the spirit and are:

(1) Idolatry.

(2) Witchcraft or sorcery. This means all dealing with the occult, such as magical arts and spiritism.

3. Sins of temper (vv. 20, 21).

These take place in the sphere of the mind and are:

(1) Hatred. (2) Variance, which means strife and contention. (3) Emulations; jealousy. (4) Wrath; bursts of passions. (5) Seditions; factions in the state. (6) Heresies; factions in the church. (7) Envyings. (8). Murders.

4. Sins of excess (v. 21).

(1) Drunkenness. This means indulgence in intoxicating liquors.

(2) Revelings, acts of dissipation under the influence of intoxicants.

IV. The Fruit of the Spirit (vv. 22-24).

This indicates action in the realm of life. The product of the Holy Spirit indwelling the believer.

1. Love to God and man.

2. Joy; glad-heartedness because of what God has done.

3. Peace with God and fellowman.

4. Long suffering; taking insult and injury without murmuring.

5. Gentleness; kindness to others.

6. Goodness; doing good to others.

7. Faith; believing God and committing all to him.

8. Meekness; submission to God.

9. Temperance; self-control in all things.

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceland, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist, son of a carpenter. Ernestine's sister, Lillian, knowing their father would disapprove, urges her to end the affair, but Ernestine refuses. They make a runaway marriage. Briceland is furious, but helpless, as Ernestine is of age. Loring Hamilton, lawyer, wins Lillian's consent to be his wife. Will and Ernestine begin their married life in a single room in a humble neighborhood. John Poole, Will's best friend, gives a birthday party for Ernestine at Ruby Pastano's resort.

"But you have lived in the country?"

"Oh, yes, always, in the summer. My Grandmother Langley had a home in Indiana where my father's quarries are. Why do you ask?"

"Never mind me. Tell me of yourself. This house in the country, and your home on Sheridan road is a long way from here."

Ernestine understood his idea, but she refused to be drawn into such a complicated conversation.

"It is only a few miles," she replied, and he gave an impatient exclamation.

"It is a thousand miles and a hundred years at least," he said. "Tell me about your mother's house."

Ernestine thought about it.

"Do you know anything about American period furniture, Mr. Pastano? There is a Duncan Phyfe table, and pierced brass fire-fender, in the living room; four-poster beds upstairs, with hooked rugs and woven counterpanes—all of the things have come into the family honestly, through natural possession, and not from auction rooms. But, of course, you know."

She smiled at him. Her long hands lay together in the immaculate perfection of her yellow chiffon lap. Her voice was low, only for his ears, and though she thought him very strange, she gave him her gravest, youngest courtesy.

"I know nothing about America, at all, it seems."

"It's just the house—I'll take you to see it some day, if you like, although mamma doesn't like people to consider it a museum, as some experts do. Of course, I don't live there since my marriage. We live in a rooming house on Erie street, and it just shows that furniture and things do not mean so much, for I am happier now than I was."

"You have left this house of your mother, with pierced brass from your own ancestors, to live in Erie street?" She nodded and smiled again, and her eyes pleaded for his understanding.

He shook his head sadly. He heaved a vast sigh.

"No, I do not understand America. Continually I am full of new astonishment. Women are somewhat the same the world around—but American men are outside my comprehension."

"You have been successful here," she reminded him, but he brushed her comment aside, pursuing his own thought aloud.

"No, I do not understand. If my son is penniless; if he is an artist starving in a garret, and the great, the incredible good fortune come to him that he shall marry a girl of noble birth, who has a quiet voice, and gentle little hands, and a brow where breeding shows its lovely smile—if my son have the grace and the smile of fortune to marry such a girl, and he bring her to a place like this—" He looked about him with scorn. "If he bring his wife to this brothel—this sink—I take a knife in my own hand and stab him through the heart. You must go away from here instantly—now! There is activity in this room that pollutes the very air. You will strangle in it—"

Ernestine's heart stopped beating in her astonishment. She felt that she had been unbearably affronted, and she rose and stood pale with anger. Mr. Pastano rose and stood before her, and met with approval the blaze of her eyes. A waiter appeared instantly with her coat, and he took it and wrapped it about her with immense dignity.

"So, go, princess!" he exclaimed, and bowed a little, and looked at her again, his own eyes alight. "You have only my good wishes. It is unfortunate I must confess the title to a place unfit for you, but this place was not made for you. The unfit, the broken, the abnormal must have their haunts, and they are not for others. Some day, perhaps, it will be my fortune that we shall be friends."

Every one was staring at them. Will had risen and stood beside her, smiling uncertainly, not knowing at all what was going forward.

"I want to go home," Ernestine said to him icily.

"Tommy will take you," Will answered easily, "I have to take Mr. Poole to his flat."

Ernestine felt herself beginning to tremble with the indignities heaped upon her. She had been so in love, so exposed, that it all hurt her incredibly. She looked about her uncertainly, then laughed and answered Will with composure.

"I don't believe I'll have to depend on Tommy. Here are Lillian and Loring. They'll take me home."

Will swung about in astonishment, and there, indeed, coming through the room unceasingly, were Lillian and her lover. Ernestine stood, smiling malignantly, as they came forward.

"Ernestine," exclaimed Lillian, when she was near enough, "I wanted to see you. We went to Mrs. Bennett's, but the maid said you were here, so we followed you. Can you come with us?"

"I was just going," answered Ernestine. "But wait and meet our friends. This is my sister, Miss Briceland, Mrs. Wiston, and Mr. Poole, Lillian, and Monsieur Mostane, and Mr. Wiston of the Sun, and Mr. Underwood, and Mr. Heyward—and this is Mr. Pastano, who owns this charming place. And this is Mr. Hamilton, Mrs. Wiston—"

The men had risen and were fumbling over the acknowledgments of the introductions. Ernestine seemed the most composed person present, and no one could have guessed that her knees were trembling.

"We wanted to get on, if you and Will can come with us," said Loring.

"But You Have Lived in the Country?"

while Mr. Pastano stood and regarded the newcomers evenly.

"I'll come with you, but Will has an engagement before he returns home. Goodbye, Mr. Poole. Thank you for the evening."

She gave her hand to her host, and he put his own hand on her shoulder to steady himself. Loring winced and scowled at this contact, but Ernestine was now in complete command of herself and smiled steadily. Mr. Poole's heavy face, his confusion, did not dismay her. She bade him an affectionate good night, then turned to the others.

"Good night, all of you. I'm sorry to run away, from my own party, but somebody must start. If you will excuse me—Good night, Will. I'll see you later."

She gave Will a luminous look. He did not answer but stared at her silently, and she turned, sweeping her wrap about her, carrying herself like a queen of the realm, and went off, Loring's black bulk between the sisters, his face dark with forebodings.

Down the wooden stairs they passed in complete silence. A new sedan stood at the curb, and Loring in majestic silence opened the car door for the girls who got in the back seat. He closed the door and got in the driver's seat and started the engine. Lillian and Ernestine sat close together in the warmth and comfort of the heated upholstered, glass-enclosed interior. Ernestine felt for the first time a poignant homesickness for comfort and convenience.

"Why didn't Will come with us?" asked Loring from the front seat.

Ernestine decided to be frank.

"You could see that Mr. Poole had been drinking too much, couldn't you? Well, Will felt that he ought to take him home and see that he got there safely. He often does that. They're good friends, you know. And you mustn't think badly of Mr. Poole. He's old, and, really, he is a wonderful man."

"But how about you? How would you have got home? Our coming along was an accident."

"Tommy Tucker would have taken me," said Ernestine calmly. "Or the Wistons, or Monsieur Mostane. I'd have gone home all right."

There was a silence of disapproval and adjustment. The car rolled smoothly along the quiet streets.

"Then everything's all right?" asked Lillian diffidently.

"Of course, darling."

"I'm so glad. Will you come and have lunch with mamma and me tomorrow and let me tell you all our plans?"

"I'll see," said Ernestine. "Now, I'll have to go home. I'm terribly tired."

"Of course you are. It's late. I'm tired, too. But, Ernestine, I'm so happy that I wonder if I can be any happier." Her voice was bright and clear—quick and competent. Ernestine remembered the tears and passion of her own engagement.

"You will be happy always. You will," she said with intensity.

They left her at the stone steps and watched until she opened the door with her latchkey and disappeared into the dark prison-like house. Then Loring turned the car about and, with Lillian at his side, started back north. Lillian cuddled against him.

"Oh, Lorie," she said sorrowfully, "she isn't happy. You know she isn't. It wouldn't be so bad for her to be poor, if only he were good to her. But you can see that he neglects her. If he cannot provide for her decently he could at least be a gentleman to her. But after all she has done for him, he mistreats her."

"Don't be disturbed about it, darling," said Loring in a low voice. "There's nothing we can do now. Only be good to her and wait for her to waken."

In Mrs. Bennett's boarding house Ernestine climbed the stairs slowly, feeling herself weak with rage.

CHAPTER V

The First Quarrel

Ernestine's anger and resentment grew like a bonfire. The small front room was cold, but she was unaware of its temperature or of the frost gathering thick on the window. Everything was fuel to the flame which burned in her. The longer Will delayed the more her anger grew. His cavalier treatment of her. Tommy could take her home! Mr. Poole needed him. More than anything else, more, she told herself, than the humiliation of Mr. Pastano's scorn was this fact, that Mr. Poole mattered more than she did.

She gave herself up to anger as she had given herself to love—with abandon. Will had neglected her. He had humiliated her. She knew that she would not have cared for any of it so much if she had not been forced to see it through the horrified eyes of her sister and Loring. They were pitying her now. She could imagine Lillian's comments, Loring's sympathy. That was the crux of the whole matter. And Mr. Poole, the vile old drunkard! Was this the sort of friendship her marriage was to bring her? She had given up everything for Will—everything! Was he to sacrifice nothing for her? Could he not abandon this adoration of an obscure old man who happened to be a cartoonist? It was not necessary for these gifted people to foregather in such a place. She burned and trembled as she recalled Pastano's contempt. That strangers should need to instruct her as to her proper place—

So absorbing were her thoughts, so wrapped was she in the resounding cadences of her own inner tumult, that she did not hear the outer door nor Will's soft step on the stairs, when at last he came.

"Up yet?" he asked in a husky whisper. "You should have been in bed two hours ago. It's cold as the devil outside. But what's the matter, kitten? Aren't you well?"

"Don't speak to me!" said Ernestine, and the fact that, like himself, she had to lower her voice in consideration for people sleeping on either side only added to her rage.

"But Ernestine!"

"Don't speak to me!" she cried again, and this time her voice was clear. "I never want to go anywhere with you again."

"Be silent," he commanded in a voice low but stern, and his eyes leaped back at her with an anger equal to her own. "Have you lost your wits? Shouting in this place in the middle of the night?"

Ernestine stood, her mouth open a little in amazement at his tone. Hot words trembled upon her tongue.

Discoveries Put Roman Art on Higher Plane

But archeological discoveries in Italy and the Roman dominion within the last two or three decades, and the scientific comparison of Roman art with Greek and other art, and the consequent evaluation of its merits, have put Rome on a rather high plane of artistic production.

No longer is it to be believed that there was no Roman art before the time of the empire; from the fourth to the second centuries before Christ there was a large and meritorious amount of work done, both in painting and in sculpture. A fairly large piece of wall painting was found in a tomb on the Esquiline hill in Rome. It dates from the end of the fourth century B. C., and represents a group of Roman generals holding a conference.

The draughtsmanship is spirited and the massing of the figures in the background is technically superb. It happens also to be the earliest—to date—example in Rome of a superposed frieze decoration. The idea may well have been derived from Ionian models, but the departures in technique are so important and so Roman that the style was believed to be native and it became the pattern which was developed into the Roman triumphal arch relief work.—Washington Star.

Modern Life Compels

Virtue of Punctuality

Human beings, we suspect, are almost without exception tardy. The man who is always on time for his social engagements is regarded as a sort of freak by his friends; indeed, he is regarded as somewhat objectionable, for by his punctuality he makes them feel guilty when they arrive 20, 30 or 40 minutes late. As for the man who is on time for business engagements, he probably does not exist. There are a score or more time-clock companies listed in New York; all of them seem to be prosperous, and their wares are not bought, we may be sure, by companies whose employees are on time every morning to the minute. Left to their own devices, these employees would get to work anywhere from one minute to eight hours late.

Yet when you consider the human race in the aggregate as distinguished from human beings in the particular it is as punctual as an eclipse. It is more punctual than an eclipse, for if an eclipse were ten minutes late that would cause no particular surprise; but if the rush hour crowd at a restaurant were ten minutes late the manager would be out on the street running around to see where the parade was. Crowds can be predicted almost to the minute. Part of this, perhaps, is due to such compulsions as we spoke of above; time clocks, the necessity to eat lunch at a given hour and in a given length of time, and so on. But part of it is not. The big movie theaters run continuous shows, so that there is no special reason to get to them on time. If you miss the first part when you go in, you can always wait and see it before you go out. Yet the queues in front of these theaters always seem to reach their maximum length at about the same time; even here you could set your watch by the crowd. Inside, however, sitting about the foyer, you see many fidgety persons looking at their watches; they are waiting for somebody, and that somebody is late.—New York World.

Unharmed by Long Fall

Reversing the case of Humpty Dumpty, a Stockholm roofer recently fell seven stories to the street without causing himself more damage than a broken tooth. The workman, Tore Fredelin, was nailing plates on the edge of a mansard roof, when the plank he stood on gave way and he tumbled to earth. He said later that he remembered striking many beams before he reached the ground, but he remained conscious throughout. Passersby who had watched him fall could hardly believe their eyes when they saw Fredelin unconcernedly pick himself up and brush off his clothes.

In a quarrel, never say anything sarcastic to a friend you expect to make up with.
